

HENDRIX & WEHAGE, LLP
Joseph A. Hendrix
500 N. State College Blvd., Suite 1100
Orange, California 92868
Telephone: (714) 919-4440
Facsimile: (719) 919-4450

TODD C. BANK (motion for pro hac
vice admission pending)
TBLaw101@aol.com
119-40 Union Turnpike
Fourth Floor
Kew Gardens, New York 11415
Telephone: (718) 520-7125
Facsimile: (866) 698-7850

DANIEL A. OSBORN 132472
OSBORN LAW, P.C.
295 Madison Avenue, 39th Floor
New York, New York 10017
Telephone: (212) 725-9800
Facsimile: (212) 725-9808

Attorneys for Objector

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN JOSE DIVISION

----- X
IN RE GOOGLE BUZZ USER
PRIVACY LITIGATION
This Pleading Relates To:
ALL CASES
----- X

5:10-CV-00672-JW
Date: January 31, 2010
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Place: Courtroom 8, 4th Floor
[Hon. James Ware]

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES iii

INTRODUCTION 1

STATEMENT OF ISSUES TO BE DECIDED 1

STATEMENT OF THE RELEVANT FACTS 1

ARGUMENT 1

 POINT I 2

 THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT IS SUBJECT TO A HIGH STANDARD OF REVIEW BECAUSE IT WAS REACHED BEFORE CLASS CERTIFICATION 2

 POINT II 2

 THE USE OF CY PRES RELIEF IN LIEU OF PAYMENTS TO THE PUTATIVE CLASS MEMBERS WAS IMPROPER 3

 A. The Number of Class Members Has Not Been Identified 3

 B. The Parties Have Artificially Inflated the Size of the Class
 by Improperly Extending the Class Period 5

 C. Google’s Agreement to a Cy Pres Distribution in Exchange for the Waiver of the Putative Class Members’ Claims for Actual Damages is Improper..... 5

 POINT III..... 8

 THE LAWSUITS DID NOT PROMPT GOOGLE TO MAKE ANY CHANGES AND THUS DID NOT CONFER A BENEFIT ON THE CLASS 8

 POINT IV..... 11

 THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT IS CONFUSING, AND DEVOID OF DETAILS, WITH RESPECT TO THE CY PRES AWARD 11

1 POINT V 13

2 THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT DOES NOT REQUIRE

3 GOOGLE TO DO ANYTHING CONCRETE WITH RESPECT TO ITS

4 PURPORTED “PUBLIC EDUCATION” PLAN..... 13

5 POINT VI..... 15

6 THE CLASS NOTICE IS INVALID 15

7 A. The Class Notice Did Not the Potential Value

8 of the Putative Class Members’ Claims 15

9 B. The Opt-Out Instructions in the Class Notice are Confusing and Inconsistent

10 With the Opt-Out Instructions in the Proposed Settlement Agreement 16

11 C. The Requirement That Objectors Provide Proof of

12 Class Membership Was Unnecessarily Confusing..... 19

13 D. The Class Notice Was Misleading With Respect to the Size of the Class..... 20

14 POINT VII 21

15 THE SETTLEMENTS IN OTHER CASES UPON WHICH

16 CLASS COUNSEL RELIES SUPPORT THE REJECTION

17 OF THE Proposed Settlement Agreement 21

18 CONCLUSION..... 22

19

20

21

22

23

24

25

26

27

28

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

Crawford v. Equifax Payment Servs., Inc.,
201 F.3d 877 (7th Cir. 2000) 5

Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp.,
150 F.3d 1011 (9th Cir. 1998) 2

Lindsay v. Government Employees Ins. Co.,
448 F. 3d 416 (D.C. Cir. 2006)..... 17

Molski v. Gleich,
318 F.3d 937 (9th Cir. 2003) passim

Rodriguez v. West Publishing Corp.,
563 F.3d 948 (9th Cir. 2009) 15

Shaffer v. Continental Casualty Co.,
362 Fed. Appx. 627, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 726 (9th Cir. Jan. 12, 2010) 1

Simpao v. Govt. of Guam,
369 Fed. Appx. 837, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 4765 (9th Cir. Mar. 5, 2010)..... 15

Six (6) Mexican Workers v. Ariz. Citrus Growers,
904 F.2d 1301 (9th Cir. 1990) 7

Statutes

18 U.S.C. §§ 2707(c) and 2520(c)(2) 7

42 U.S.C. § 12101, et seq.,..... 5

Rules

Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B)(v)..... 16, 17

Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e) 1

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(d)(5) 1

Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 23(a) and 23(b)(3) 16

Rule 23(b)(3)..... 16, 17

Rule 23(c)(2)..... 16

1 Putative Class Member Tanya Rudgayzer (“Rudgayzer”), by the undersigned counsel,
2 submits this Memorandum of Points and Authorities pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure
3 23(d)(5), in support of her objections to the Proposed Settlement Agreement.
4

5 INTRODUCTION

6 Class member/Objector Rudgayzer objects to the Proposed Settlement Agreement on 7 several grounds. Most notably, the proposed settlement releases claims of potentially injured
8 class members for absolutely no consideration. The class representatives, who have asked to be
9 awarded $2500 each for their role in the litigation, have agreed to the breadth of such a release
10 because they, through Class Counsel, did not find any class members who suffered actual injury.
11 The source of the information relied upon was materials received by Google from complaining
12 class members, none of which have been shared with the absent class members or the Court.
13 Obviously, Google is more than willing to agree to such a release. The Ninth Circuit, however,
14 has rejected a similar settlement.
15
16

17 There are a number of other deficiencies, set forth below, that preclude this Court from 18 finding the proposed settlement to be fair, reasonable and adequate.

19 STATEMENT OF ISSUES TO BE DECIDED

20 Putative Class Member Rudgayzer identifies the following issue to be decided: whether 21 the Proposed Settlement Agreement reached by the parties is fair, reasonable, and adequate.
22

23 STATEMENT OF THE RELEVANT FACTS

24 On October 7, 2010, this Court preliminarily approved the Proposed Settlement
25 Agreement. See Second Amended Order Preliminarily Approving Class Action Settlement
26 (“Second Amended Order”), Doc. 50.
27
28

ARGUMENT

POINT I

THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT IS SUBJECT TO A HIGH STANDARD OF REVIEW BECAUSE IT WAS REACHED BEFORE CLASS CERTIFICATION

This Court is well aware that “[a] district court may approve a class action settlement ‘only after a hearing and on finding that it is fair, reasonable, and adequate.’” Shaffer v. Continental Casualty Co., 362 Fed. Appx. 627, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 726 at *3 (9th Cir. Jan. 12, 2010), quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e). In assessing whether a proposed class settlement is “fair, reasonable, and adequate,”

[t]he district court must “explore[] comprehensively” relevant factors, such as: “the strength of the plaintiffs’ case; the risk, expense, complexity, and likely duration of further litigation; the risk of maintaining class action status throughout the trial; the amount offered in settlement; the extent of discovery completed and the stage of the proceedings; the experience and views of counsel; the presence of a governmental participant; and the reaction of the class members to the proposed settlement.” Id. at *3-*4, quoting Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., 150 F.3d 1011, 1026 (9th Cir. 1998).

The Court is also undoubtedly aware that “[a] ‘higher standard of fairness’ is required where . . . settlement negotiations occurred before class certification.” Id.; accord, Molski v. Gleich, 318 F.3d 937, 952 (9th Cir. 2003). That is the case here. Settlement of the litigation occurred before certification. In fact, no motion for class certification had even been filed. This Court thus has an enhanced duty to scrutinize the proposed settlement.

POINT II

THE USE OF CY PRES RELIEF IN LIEU OF PAYMENTS TO THE PUTATIVE CLASS MEMBERS WAS IMPROPER

A. The Number of Class Members Has Not Been Identified

Curiously, no evidence has been provided to either the putative class members or this Court identifying the number of class members. In the absence of such information, there is no way for a court to properly evaluate the proposed settlement. That is especially the case here, where the proposed settlement involves cy pres relief in lieu of monetary payments.

In the Consolidated and Amended Class Action Complaint (“Complaint”), Plaintiffs allege that, “[i]n January of 2009, Gmail had 31.2 million users in the United States,” Compl., Doc. 31, ¶ 40. The Complaint cites Anthony Ha, Zimbra Tops 40M Paid Users: More Popular Than Gmail? (Mar. 5, 2009) (the “Zimbra article”), and notes that the Zimbra article is “available at <http://venturebeat.com/2009/03/05/zimbra-tops-40m-paid-users-more-popular-than-gmail/>.” Id. The Zimbra article, however, did not identify the number of Gmail users. Rather, the article stated that “Gmail received . . . 31.2 million unique monthly visitors . . . in the US during the month of January [2009] (according to comScore)” (emphasis added). According to Google, “Unique Visitors represents the number of unduplicated (counted only once) visitors to your website over the course of a specified time period. A Unique Visitor is determined using cookies.” www.google.com/support/analytics/bin/answer.py?hl=en&answer=33087 (emphasis added). As further explained by Google, “[a] ‘cookie’ is a small file containing a string of characters that is sent to your computer when you visit a website. When you visit the website again, the cookie allows that site to recognize your browser. Cookies may store user preferences and other information.” www.google.com/privacy_faq.html#toc-terms-cookie. Because the putative class is defined as being composed of Gmail users, the number of such users is the 1 relevant statistic, not the number of the Gmail website's "unique visitors." By providing only the

2 latter figure, Class Counsel has failed to provide evidence of the actual number of putative class
3 members, in the absence of which this Court may not approve Class Counsel's attempt to portray
4 the class as being so large as to justify cy pres relief in lieu of payments to the putative class
5 members.
6

7 Class Counsel's motion for final approval is no more helpful, relying on "industry
8 research" for its claim that there are more than 37 million Gmail users in the US." Motion for 9 Final Approval, Doc. 61 at 7, to which Class Counsel cites Erick Schonfeld, Gmail Nudges Past
10 AOL Email in the U.S. To Take No. 3 Spot, TechCrunch.com, Aug. 14, 2009 (the "Schonfeld
11 article"), available at http://techcrunch.com/2009/08/14/gmail-nudges-past-aol-email-in-the-us-
12 to-take-no-3-spot. Because the Schonfeld article, just like the Zimbra article, contains only a 13 statistic regarding unique monthly visitors, it is as unreliable as the Zimbra article.
14

15 Objector Rudgayzer acknowledges that in light of the number of "unique visitors" to 16 Gmail, there probably is a large number of class members. That supposition, however, is not a
17 substitute for actual evidence, which is required. It seems odd, given the face-to-face meeting
18 between Class Counsel and Google's counsel, the 14-hour mediation among the parties, and the 19 confirmatory discovery conducted by Class Counsel, that this information was not produced.
20
21 Instead, Class Counsel relies upon what are essentially estimates from magazines.
22

23 The Class Notice, in defending the fact that the putative class members would receive no
24 monetary benefits, states that "few, if any, class members suffered compensable actual damages
25 and [] a pro rata distribution of the fund to the Class would not be feasible due to the size of the 26 Class." Class Notice, § 7, ¶ 3 (a copy of the Class Notice is annexed hereto as Exhibit "A").
27
28 However, because no reliable evidence has been presented as to the number of class members,

1 “there is no evidence that proof of individual claims would be burdensome or that distribution of 2 damages would be costly.” Molski v. Gleich, 318 F.3d 937, 955 (9th Cir. 2003). As a result, this 3 Court cannot properly determine whether the proposed settlement is fair, reasonable, and 4 adequate.
 5

6 B. The Parties Have Artificially Inflated the Size of the Class
 7 by Improperly Extending the Class Period

8 The Class Notice defines the class period as February 9, 2010, i.e., the date on which 9 Google launched its Buzz program, to November 2, 2010. See Class Notice, § 5. However, the 10 class period should have ended on April 5, 2010, the last date on which Google made the 11 changes that Class Counsel cites in support of the Proposed Settlement Agreement. See Class
 12 Counsel’s Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Motion for Order Preliminarily
 13 Approving Settlement (“Class Counsel’s Memorandum”), Doc. 61 at 3. Indeed, nowhere does 14 Class Counsel argue that any unlawful conduct occurred after April 5. By improperly extending 15 the class period, the parties have unjustifiably increased the size of the class to include those 16 individuals who became Gmail users between April 6, 2010, and November 2, 2010. As a result,
 17 Class Counsel has made it less practical to pay damages to the true class members, whatever the 18 size of the class, than would otherwise be the case.
 19
 20

21 C. Google’s Agreement to a Cy Pres Distribution in Exchange for the Waiver
 22 of the Putative Class Members’ Claims for Actual Damages is Improper

23 In Molski v. Gleich, 318 F.3d 937, 955 (9th Cir. 2003), a case that arose under the 24 Americans With Disabilities Act (“ADA”), 42 U.S.C. § 12101, et seq., and various state laws,
 25 the Ninth Circuit reversed the District Court’s approval of a proposed settlement even though it 26 included concrete and meaningful injunctive relief (namely, numerous changes to comply with 27 the ADA and related state laws) and an agreement by the defendant to make donations totaling 28

1 $195,000 to eight different disability organizations in California. Molski, 318 F.3d at 943-44.
 2 The settlement agreement did not provide for specific, individualized relief for each class
 3 member, and most importantly, it contained a general release on behalf of all the class members.
 4
 5 See id. at 944.

6 Notwithstanding the putative benefits of the settlement agreement, the Ninth Circuit
 7 rejected it, explaining as follows:

8 Here, the class members lost their rights to pursue any claims (excepting 9 those for physical injury); the class representative received monetary relief of 10 $5,000; and the class counsel was paid $50,000. The corporation was required to 11 make tax-deductible donations to third parties and simply meet its legal 12 obligations (or perhaps even less than that required) under the ADA. See
 13 Crawford v. Equifax Payment Servs., Inc., 201 F.3d 877, 881 (7th Cir. 2000)
 14 (rejecting the settlement as unfair because the named plaintiff and class counsel 15 were paid “to go away” and “the other class members received nothing ... and lost 16 the right to pursue class relief.”). In sum, the class members received nothing; the 17 named plaintiff and class counsel received compensation for his injury and their 18 time; and the defendant escaped paying any punitive or almost any compensatory
 19 damages. Id. (“[A]ll the settlement does for ... [the absent class members] is cut 20 them off at the knees.”).

21 Id. at 953-954 (emphases added).

22 The Ninth Circuit further explained that, “[i]ntertwined with our finding that the 23 settlement agreement was unfair is the fact that the cy pres award in this case replaced the claims
 24 for actual and treble damages of potentially thousands of individuals. . . .  We have left open 25 the question of whether a cy pres award can ever be used as a substitute for actual damages.” Id.
 26 at 954 (emphasis added). Here, although the Complaint alleged actual damages by the putative
 27 class members and their resulting entitlement to relief, see Compl., Doc. 31, ¶¶ 6, 43, 76, 99, 28 101, 104(d), the Class Notice states, as noted above, that “few, if any, Class Members suffered compensable actual damages.” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 7, ¶ 3. Like Molski, those claims are now being released, despite the fact that no evidence has been offered to either the putative class

1 members or this Court that would enable a determination one way or the other as to whether this
2 assertion is correct.¹

3
4 In contrast to the allegations in the Complaint, Class Counsel's Memorandum in support
5 of the proposed settlement asserts that, "[o]f all consumer feedback sent to Google about Buzz,
6 Class Counsel could identify no class members who allege that they suffered out-of-pocket
7 damages." Class Counsel's Memorandum, Doc. 61 at 5. Class Counsel states that, "[i]n
8 accordance with the terms of the June 2, 2010 term sheet, Google provided Plaintiffs' counsel
9 with thousands of pages of documents, including all consumer feedback that it had received
10 about the Buzz program, and declarations by Google executives concerning Buzz usage
11 statistics, product design, and the user complaint process." Dec. of Gary E. Mason, Doc. 42, § 8.
12 However, neither the "term sheet" nor the documents that were supposedly produced pursuant to 13 it have been disclosed, thus precluding both the putative class members and this Court from 14 reaching an informed conclusion regarding the issue of whether any of the members sustained 15 actual damages. Class Counsel's statement that none of the class members sustained actual 16 damages, based on whatever it was that was given to them by Google's counsel, is not evidence 17 and prevents this Court from fully and properly evaluating the fairness, reasonableness and 18 adequacy of the proposed settlement.
19
20
21
22
23
24

25 ¹ Furthermore, there was no formal discovery whatsoever in the present case, and the 26 "discovery" that did occur was what Class Counsel called "Confirmatory Discovery," Class
27 Counsel's Memorandum, Doc. 61 at 4, i.e., discovery that Class Counsel asserts to have been 28 conducted as "part of the settlement." The lack of discovery was also deemed a problem in Molski:
"This outcome is particularly problematic because only a minimal amount of discovery occurred in this case, and the primary components of the agreement were reached prior to filing of the class action." Molski, 318 F.3d at 954.

In sum, just as in Molski, “the cy pres award circumvents individualized proof requirements and alters the substantive rights at issue in this case” and should be rejected. Molski, 318 F.3d at 955.²

POINT III

THE LAWSUITS DID NOT PROMPT GOOGLE TO MAKE ANY CHANGES AND THUS DID NOT CONFER A BENEFIT ON THE CLASS

While the parties may have agreed among themselves that Google made changes to Google Buzz in response to the various lawsuits that were filed, both Class Counsel’s own admission and the chronology of events tell a different story.

In Class Counsel’s Memorandum under the title “Google’s Response To The Privacy Concerns”, Class Counsel states:

While denying any legal liability, Google responded quickly to improve Google Buzz and to address concerns that had been raised about it. Google announced and implemented several modifications within the first week after Buzz’s release. These changes included: (1) modifying the introductory screens to provide a more visible option for users to opt-out of the public display of their “follower” and “following” lists on their profile page; (2) improving the ease with which users could block unwanted followers; (3) moving from a system that automatically selected the people a user was “following” to an “auto-suggest” model that displayed a suggested list and made the ability to de-select individuals a user did not wish to follow more prominent and userfriendly; (4) changing the default so that users must affirmatively opt-in if they wish Buzz to connect to other publicly shared Google content (such as photo albums uploaded to Picasa); and (5) adding a Buzz tab to the Gmail settings page, through which users could control privacy and other settings relating to their Buzz account, as well as disable

² In addition to a claim for actual damages, the Complaint sought statutory damages under 18 U.S.C. §§ 2707(c) and 2520(c)(2). See Compl., Doc. 31, ¶¶ 76, 92. In Molski, supra, the Ninth Circuit addressed the use of cy pres awards to resolve treble damages claims, which are analogous to statutory damages claims because they do not depend upon proof of actual damages. See Molski, 318 F.3d at 954-955. The Molski court noted that the Ninth Circuit had previously found that cy pres awards may in fact be used to resolve statutory damages claims because “concerns . . . ‘about the impermissible circumvention of individual proof requirements’ [a]re not at issue” with respect to claims that do not require “a showing of actual damage.” Molski, 318 F.3d at 954-955, quoting Six (6) Mexican Workers v. Ariz. Citrus Growers, 904 F.2d 1301, 1306 (9th Cir. 1990). However, Molski rejected the cy pres award at issue there because, as noted in Point II(A), supra, no reliable evidence had been presented as to the number of class members.

1 their Buzz account completely if so desired. Then, on April 5, 2010, several
 2 months after the original plaintiffs filed their case, Google presented a
 3 “confirmation page” to each Buzz user. The page described the settings on the 4 user’s Buzz account and asked the user to confirm that the account was set up the way the user wanted, placing particular emphasis on the privacy settings for the user’s account.

5 Class Counsel’s Memorandum, Doc. 61 at 3.

6 Google Buzz was launched on February 9, 2010. The first lawsuit was filed on February
 7 17, 2010, eight days later. By Class Counsel’s own admission, Google made at least five major
 8 changes to correct complaints about Google Buzz before any lawsuits were filed. Class
 9 Counsel identifies only one change made after the commencement of litigation, namely an April
 10 5, 2010 change in which Google presented a “confirmation page” to each Buzz user. That page 11 merely described the settings on the user’s Buzz account and asked the user to confirm that the 12 account, including privacy settings, was set up the way the user wanted. Notably, three of the 13 five consolidated lawsuits were filed on or after April 5, 2010. There simply is no way for those 14 lawsuits to have influenced Google’s corrective actions, all of which were accomplished no later
 15 than April 5.

16 The following chronology of Google’s above-described changes to its Buzz program
 17 shows that these benefits were not the result of the various lawsuits:

- 18 (1) modifying the introductory screens to provide a more
 19 visible option for users to opt-out of the public display
 20 of their “follower” and “following” lists on their 21 profile page to provide a more visible option

22 Google made this change on February 11, 2010. See
 23 www.gmailblog.blogspot.com/2010/02/millions-of-buzz-users-and-improvements.html (“Google 24 Blog Post 1”). However, that was six days before February 17, 2010, the latter being the date on 25 which the Action was commenced. See Dec. of Gary E. Mason, Doc. 42, § 2.
 26
 27
 28

(2) improving the ease with which users could block unwanted followers

Google made this change on February 11, 2010. See Google Blog Post 1.

(3) moving from a system that automatically selected the people a user was “following” to an “auto-suggest” model that displayed a suggested list and made the ability to de-select individuals a user did not wish to follow more prominent and userfriendly

On February 13, 2010, i.e., before the commencement of the first action, Google announced that this change would be “starting this week.” See www.gmailblog.blogspot.com/2010/02/new-buzz-start-up-experience-based-on.html (“Google Blog Post 2”).

(4) changing the default so that users must affirmatively opt-in if they wish Buzz to connect to other publicly shared Google content (such as photo albums uploaded to Picasa)

Here, too, Google announced, on February 13, 2010, that this change, under which “Buzz will no longer connect your public Picasa Web Albums and Google Reader shared items automatically,” would be “starting this week.” See Google Blog Post 2.

(5) adding a Buzz tab to the Gmail settings page, through which users could control privacy and other settings relating to their Buzz account, as well as disable their Buzz account completely if so desired.

Even the use of a “confirmation page” was introduced before the filing of the present action on February 17, 2010. Google had announced in its posting of February 13, 2010, that, “[f]or the tens of millions of you who have already started using Buzz, over the next couple weeks we’ll be showing you a similar version of this new start-up experience to give you a second chance to review and confirm the people you’re following.” Google Blog Post 2 (emphasis added). The only apparent change that might have occurred after the present litigation began is that the confirmation page allows users to “modify any of the sites you have connected

1 to Google Buzz, like Picasa, Google Reader, or Twitter.” Google Blog Post 4. However, this
 2 posting does not indicate when this change took effect.

3 Furthermore, neither the putative class members nor this Court has been given any details
 4 of the supposed “additional refinements to Buzz.” On February 18, 2010, however, Google did 5 announce that Google Blog Posts 1 and 2 had “noted some of the improvements we’ve made to 6 Buzz based on some really helpful user feedback. We’ve made a few other efforts to make Buzz
 7 settings easier to manage, including adding Buzz to the Google Dashboard.”
 8 www.googlepublicpolicy.blogspot.com/2010/02/control-your-buzz-settings-in-google.html
 9 (“Blog Post 3”). Thus, here, too, such changes preceded the litigation.
 10
 11

12 POINT IV

13 THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT IS CONFUSING, AND 14 DEVOID OF DETAILS, WITH RESPECT TO THE CY PRES AWARD

15 The third and final paragraph of Section 7 of the Class Notice states that “the Common 16 Fund amounts in excess of fees, costs, expenses, and incentive awards will be distributed to 17 organizations that advance the privacy interests of internet users such as the Class Members.
 18 The Settlement Agreement, available at www.buzzclassaction.com, describes all of the details
 19 about the proposed Settlement Agreement.” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 7, ¶ 3. However, the 20 Proposed Settlement Agreement is not only alarmingly vacuous in its provision of information
 21 about such organizations; it is utterly confusing as well.
 22

23 Section 3.4 of the Proposed Settlement Agreement states that “Google agrees to and shall 24 deposit in an interest-bearing bank account established by Google the total sum of Eight Million
 25 Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($8,500,000.00) as a Common Fund for Class Administrator 26 fees and expenses, cy pres relief, class representative incentive payments, attorneys’ fees, and 27 costs. . . . The interest earned on [the $8,500,000.00] shall accrue to the benefit of the Common
 28

1 Fund, and the interest shall be transferred to the cy pres recipients per subsection 3.4(d), below.”
2 Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 3.4. First, as a non-English, non-colloquial term
3 that is probably not even familiar to most lawyers, “cy pres” should have been defined (even if 4 doing so would hardly have inured putative class members toward a favorable opinion of the 5 Proposed Settlement Agreement).

7 Second, Section 3.4(b) of the Proposed Settlement Agreement states that “[t]he Parties
8 shall mutually agree on the cy pres recipients and the amounts for each.” Proposed Settlement
9 Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 3.4(b). However, whereas section 1.19 of the Proposed Settlement
10 Agreement states that “‘Party’ or ‘Parties’ means Plaintiffs, Class Members, and Google, or each 11 of them,” Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 1.19 (emphasis added), nothing in the 12 Proposed Settlement Agreement, or, for that matter, in the Class Notice, provides the means by 13 which the putative class members would be able to fulfill their role in effecting mutual 14 agreement regarding the cy pres recipients. Presumably, absent class members will not have any 15 role in selecting the cy pres recipients, but that is not what the Proposed Settlement Agreement 16 says.

19 Third, Section 3.4(c) of the Proposed Settlement Agreement states that “[p]ayments to the 20 cy pres recipients shall be made out of the Common Fund by the Class Action Administrator
21 within thirty (30) Days after the latest of (1) agreement by the Parties on the cy pres recipients
22 and amounts for each, and (2) the Settlement Date.” Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, 23 § 3.4.(c) (emphasis added). Thus, the purported benefits would accrue, if at all, only after the 24 final approval of the Proposed Settlement Agreement. Furthermore, there is no deadline for the 25 “agreement by the Parties on the cy pres recipients and amounts for each,” thus meaning that 26 there is no deadline for the distribution of funds to the cy pres recipients.
27
28

POINT V

THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT DOES NOT REQUIRE GOOGLE TO DO ANYTHING CONCRETE WITH RESPECT TO ITS PURPORTED “PUBLIC EDUCATION” PLAN

The Proposed Settlement Agreement states:

Google agrees to disseminate wider public education about the privacy aspects of Google Buzz. Google agrees that it will consider the suggestions that it has received from Class Counsel and any other suggestions it may receive from Class Counsel on this issue within thirty (30) days after this Settlement Agreement is executed by all Parties. The parties agree that Google will select and design the final content of the public education efforts in its discretion. Google agrees that it will provide a report to Lead Class Counsel within three months after the Final Order and Judgment describing the public education efforts concerning the privacy aspects of Google Buzz that it undertook pursuant to this Settlement Agreement.

Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 3.3 (emphases added). See also Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 7, ¶ 2 (“Google will do more to educate users about the privacy aspects of Google Buzz. Google will consider the recommendations of Plaintiffs about the content of that public education. Google will select and design the final content of the public education efforts in its discretion, and will provide a report to Plaintiffs’ lead lawyer of the education undertaken.”) (emphases added). One could hardly imagine a more empty and vague provision. First, “Google agrees that it will consider the suggestions that it has received from Class Counsel,” but the Parties neglect to disclose what these suggestions might be, thereby making it impossible for either the putative class members or this Court to determine whether these suggestions would, if adopted, provide any benefit to the class.

Second, by providing that “Google will consider the recommendations of Plaintiffs,” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 7, ¶ 2 (emphasis added), there is clearly no right of putative class members to make suggestions, as the Proposed Settlement Agreement states that “‘Plaintiffs’ means the named Plaintiffs in the Action.” Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 1.21. If the Parties were serious about having Google consider suggestions concerning the “disseminat[ion] [of] wider public education about the privacy aspects of Google Buzz,”

1 Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 3.3, one would think that suggestions from the
2 putative class members would be welcome, by being made either directly to Google (which
3 probably knows a thing or two about setting up a web page for the purpose) or, at a minimum,
4 through Class Counsel.

5
6 Third, even if such suggestions would benefit the class, Google's compliance with this 7 provision depends only on its consideration of these suggestions. Given that, according to this 8 portion of the provision, Class Counsel has already made some suggestions, it certainly would 9 have been helpful if Google had already agreed to any of these suggestions, thereby enabling the 10 Court to determine whether there would be any benefit to the class. Alas, while it is 11 grammatically unclear whether the "thirty (30) days after this Settlement Agreement," Proposed 12 Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 3.3, is the period during which Google is to consider such 13 suggestions along with "any other suggestions it may receive from Class Counsel on this issue," 14 id., or whether the thirty-day period is merely the period during which "any other suggestions it
15 may receive from Class Counsel on this issue," id., must be made, any potential benefits to the 16 class would, in either case, be known only after final approval of the Proposed Settlement
17 Agreement. Of course, if "thirty (30) days after this Settlement Agreement" is the date by which 18 "any other suggestions it may receive from Class Counsel on this issue" must be made, then 19 apparently there is not even a deadline by which Google must "consider" such suggestions.

20 Fourth, Section 3.3 of the Proposed Settlement Agreement, consistent with its failure to 21 require anything concrete on Google's part, states that "[t]he parties agree that Google will select 22 and design the final content of the public education efforts in its discretion." Proposed 23 Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 3.3. Once again, the Parties are, in essence, asking the 24 putative class members and this Court to "trust us," but such a request hardly warrants approval
25 of the Proposed Settlement Agreement.

26
27 Finally, the "report to Lead Class Counsel within three months after the Final Order and 28 Judgment describing the public education efforts concerning the privacy aspects of Google Buzz that it undertook pursuant to this Settlement Agreement,” Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 41-1, § 3.3, is, like the rest of Section 3.3, operable only after final approval of the Proposed Settlement Agreement. Further reflecting the deficiency of Section 3.3 is the lack of any agreement to inform the putative class members of those efforts, which could have easily been done, for example, through the Google Buzz web page.

POINT VI

THE CLASS NOTICE IS INVALID

A. The Class Notice Did Not the Potential Value of the Putative Class Members’ Claims

In deciding whether to approve of the Proposed Settlement Agreement, this Court need not “specifically weigh[] the merits of the class’s case against the settlement amount and quantif[y] the expected value of fully litigating the matter,” Rodriguez v. West Publishing Corp., 563 F.3d 948, 965 (9th Cir. 2009). However, “the estimated recovery ranges by both parties and their experts” should have been provided to the Court. Id. at 966. Accord, Simpao v. Govt. of Guam, 369 Fed. Appx. 837, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 4765 at *6 (9th Cir. Mar. 5, 2010). See also Rodriguez, 563 F.3d at 965-966 (“one factor ‘that may bear on review of a settlement’ is ‘the advantages of the proposed settlement versus the probable outcome of a trial on the merits of liability and damages as to the claims, issues, or defenses of the class and individual class members,’” quoting Federal Judicial Center, Manual for Complex Litigation, § 21.62, at 316 (4th ed.2004)). Of course, such information should also have been disclosed to the putative class members so as to enable them to consider the potential recovery that they would be waiving if they remain in the class and/or do not object to the proposed settlement. Here, this information was not disclosed, not even the potential statutory damages, thereby preventing the putative class

1 members and this Court from properly weighting the merits of the Proposed Settlement
2 Agreement.

3 B. The Opt-Out Instructions in the Class Notice are Confusing and Inconsistent
4 With the Opt-Out Instructions in the Proposed Settlement Agreement

5 The Class Notice and the Proposed Settlement Agreement are materially inconsistent
6 with one another with respect to opt-out instructions. First, the Class Notice required opt-out
7 requests to be in the form of “a letter or other written document,” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 11.
8 However, the Proposed Settlement Agreement not only omits this requirement but states that opt-
9 out requests “must be signed by the Class Member under penalty of perjury.” Proposed 10 Settlement Agreement, Doc. 61, § 6.2.

11
12 Second, the Class Notice required a putative class member to “mail your request for 13 exclusion so that it is received no later than December 6, 2010,” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 11
14 (emphasis added), while the Proposed Settlement Agreement states that “[t]he request must be 15 postmarked on or before the Opt-Out Deadline.” Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 61,
16 § 6.2 (emphasis added). Thus, putative class members who relied upon the accuracy of the Class
17 Notice would likely have refrained from opting out if they believed that their request would not 18 be received by December 6, 2010, when, in fact, opt-out requests were only required to be 19 postmarked by that date.

20
21 A third discrepancy between the Settlement Agreement and the Class Notice is that only 22 the latter required that an opt-out request include the “reason why you want out [sic] of the 23 Settlement.” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 11. Putative class members might have been confused as 24 to how to explain why they wished to opt out of the class; and, more importantly, such a
25 requirement is improper. In the Second Amended Order Preliminarily Approving Class Action 26 Settlement (“Second Amended Order”), this Court ordered that, “[p]ursuant to Federal Rules of 27
28

1 Civil Procedure 23(a) and 23(b)(3), the proposed Class is hereby preliminarily certified for 2 Settlement purposes only.” Second Amended Order, Doc. 50, ¶ 3 (emphasis added). As the 3 Ninth Circuit has recognized, “notice for a Rule 23(b)(3) class must fulfill the stringent
4 requirements of Rule 23(c)(2).” Molski v. Gleich, 318 F.3d 937, 952 (9th Cir. 2003). Rule
5 23(c)(2), in turn, provides that “[t]he notice must clearly and concisely state in plain, easily
6 understood language . . . that the court will exclude from the class any member who requests
7 exclusion.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B)(v) (emphasis added). Thus, the Class Notice’s addition
8 of a requirement that putative class members explain their reasons for opting out of the class
9 violates the plain language of Rule 23(c)(2)(B)(v).
10
11

12 Furthermore, “[c]ertification pursuant to Rule 23(b)(3) [] comes with certain procedural 13 requirements: Because members of a class seeking substantial monetary damages may have 14 divergent interests, due process requires that putative class members receive notice and an 15 opportunity to opt out.” Lindsay v. Government Employees Ins. Co., 448 F. 3d 416, 420 (D.C.
16 Cir. 2006) (citation and quotation marks omitted). See also Molski, 318 F.3d at 949 (suggesting 17 that there is a due-process right to opt out of a class where monetary damages are involved and 18 are more than merely incidental to the litigation). Thus, the Class Notice’s requirement that 19 putative class members explain their reasons for opting out of the class violates the members’
20 due-process rights.
21
22

23 A fourth discrepancy between the Settlement Agreement and the Class Notice is that only
24 the latter requires “proof that you used Gmail at some point after February 9, 2010,” Class
25 Notice, Exh. “A,” § 11; that is, proof of class membership. In addition, the “proof” requirement
26 is substantively troubling for several reasons. First, and rather oddly in light of the nature of this
27 action, neither “Gmail” nor “Gmail user” is defined in either the Class Notice or the Proposed 28

1 Settlement Agreement, thus leaving putative class members to wonder whether being a “Gmail
 2 user” means that one, during the class period, merely possesses a Gmail address, visits
 3 www.gmail.com, logs onto their Gmail account, or sends or receives e-mail through his Gmail
 4 address. In addition, the Class Notice gives no indication of what constitutes the required
 5 “proof.” Is the mere listing of one’s Gmail address sufficient? Must one who wishes to opt out
 6 include a copy of an e-mail that he sent or received? Given that Google would, of course, have 7 all of the records regarding Gmail accounts, one should, at most, have been required to provide
 8 his Gmail address (which, in turn, should have been redacted before it was filed and thus made 9 publicly accessible on Pacer), and, if necessary, that he either sent or received e-mail using his 10 Gmail address during the class period, assuming that such use of a Gmail address during the 11 class period causes one to be a putative class member.

14 A class notice that is inconsistent with a Proposed Settlement Agreement is invalid. In 15 Molski, supra, the Proposed Settlement Agreement contained a release of all claims except for 16 those involving physical injury. See Molski, 318 F.3d at 952. The class notice, on the other 17 hand, stated that the settlement agreement ““does not affect the [class members’] rights . . . with 18 respect to personal injury actions.”” Id. (emphasis added). Accordingly, the court pointed out 19 that, under the settlement agreement, “[t]he term ‘personal injury’ includes claims of emotional 20 distress.” Id. Thus, the class notice suggested that putative class members’ claims for emotional
 21 distress were not being released when, by contrast, the proposed settlement had sought to release
 22 such claims. As a result, the court found that the class notice, “by failing to explain that only 23 claims involving literally physical injuries were not released under the proposed consent decree, 24 [] misled the putative class members.” Id.

1 In view of the lack of clarity of the Class Notice and the inconsistencies between the
 2 Class Notice and the Proposed Settlement Agreement, it is little wonder that so few opt-out
 3 requests have been received because these deficiencies almost surely led some putative class
 4 members to refrain from exercising their rights to opt out of the class, it is substantially likely 5 that this Court has not been fully able to consider “the reaction of the class members to the 6 proposed settlement,” Shaffer v. Continental Casualty Co., 362 Fed. Appx. 627, 2010 U.S. App.
 7 LEXIS 726 at *4 (9th Cir. Jan. 12, 2010) (citation and quotation marks omitted), which is one of 8 the factors that bears on approval of a proposed class settlement.
 9

10 In sum, the various confusing instructions in the Class Notice, and the inconsistencies
 11 between the Class Notice and the Proposed Settlement Agreement, render the Class Notice
 12 invalid.
 13

14 C. The Requirement That Objectors Provide Proof of
 15 Class Membership Was Unnecessarily Confusing

16 Similar confusion to that which has likely arisen in connection with the “proof”
 17 requirement imposed upon opt-out seekers, see Point VI, supra, would have even been more
 18 likely to arise with respect to objectors, who were required to provide “proof that you are a class
 19 member.” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 14. Whereas “proof that [a person wishing to opt out] used 20 Gmail at some point after February 9, 2010,” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 11, is confusing enough, 21 “proof that [an objector is] a class member” is not only confusing, but is unnecessarily so. The 22 Class Notice states that “the Class includes all Gmail users in the United States who were 23 presented with the opportunity to use Google Buzz before November 2, 2010.” Class Notice,
 24 Exh. “A,” § 5. Accord, Proposed Settlement Agreement, Doc. 61, § 1.3. Thus, a putative class
 25 member who wished to object to the Proposed Settlement Agreement would need to prove that
 26 he was “presented with the opportunity to use Google Buzz before November 2, 2010.”
 27
 28

1 However, mere possession of a Gmail address during the class period automatically caused one
 2 to be “presented with the opportunity to use Google Buzz,” because the Buzz program was 3 offered to everyone who possessed a Gmail address. See
 4 www.gmailblog.blogspot.com/2010/02/google-buzz-in-gmail.html (Feb. 9, 2010) (“Google
 5 Introductory Blog Post”) (“[t]oday, we’re launching Google Buzz, a new way to start
 6 conversations about the things you find interesting and share updates, photos, videos and more.
 7 Buzz is built right into Gmail, so there’s nothing to set up — you’re automatically following the 8 people you email and chat with the most. . . .  We’ll be rolling out Google Buzz to everyone
 9 over the next few days.”).

10 Because possession of a Gmail address and the opportunity to use the Buzz program went 11 hand in hand, an objector should, at most, have been required to prove that he was a Gmail user.

12 D. The Class Notice Was Misleading With Respect to the Size of the Class

13 The Class Notice states that, “[t]he Court decided that the Class includes all Gmail users
 14 in the United States who were presented with the opportunity to use Google Buzz before
 15 November 2, 2010.” Class Notice, Exh. “A,” § 5 (emphasis added). This statement clearly 16 suggests that the matter of class size has been ruled upon and is therefore not subject to 17 objection, when that is not so. See Point II(B), supra. Thus, to the extent that putative class 18 members might have objected to the size of the class, they have likely been misled into 19 refraining from making that important objection.
 20
 21
 22
 23
 24
 25
 26
 27
 28

POINT VII

THE SETTLEMENTS IN OTHER CASES UPON WHICH CLASS COUNSEL RELIES SUPPORT THE REJECTION OF THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

Class Counsel’s Memorandum contends that “[t]his package of settlement benefits compares favorably to settlements in other cases concerning alleged privacy violations that did not involve significant actual damages,” Class Counsel’s Memorandum, Doc. 61 USE NEW41 at 12, citing, inter alia, Lane v. Facebook, Inc., No. 08-cv-3845 RS (N.D. Cal. 2009), in which the total payment was $9.5 million. However, Lane, rather than supporting the approval of the Proposed Settlement Agreement, shows why it should be rejected. Neither the class notice nor the settlement agreement in Lane contained either the lack of information, or the significant confusion, regarding the terms of the settlement. Thus, unlike in the present case, both the class members in Lane, as well as the District Court, were provided with a sufficient and clear description of the settlement terms, thereby enabling the class members and the court to informatively weight the merits of the Proposed Settlement Agreement. This simply is not so in the present case.

Another key distinction between Lane and the present case is that, in Lane, the benefits of the settlement agreement were perfectly clear. First, the “Facebook Beacon” program, which was the subject of Lane, was terminated as a result of that action. See Lane Class Notice, § I.B, § 1.F, and Lane Settlement Agreement, § IV(G), ¶ 4.23 (copies of the Lane Class Notice and Lane Settlement Agreement are annexed hereto as Exhibits “B” and “C,” respectively). Second, unlike the parties in the current case, the parties in Lane did not seek to decide how to handle cy pres relief after final approval of the settlement agreement. On the contrary, the class notice and the settlement agreement provided specific terms regarding the cy pres relief, in particular naming the organization that was to receive the cy pres award.

Finally, Class Counsel also claims that the Proposed Settlement Agreement “compares favorably to [the] settlements” in In re DoubleClick, Inc. Privacy Litig., No. 00 Civ 0641 (S.D.N.Y. 2001), and DSeLise v. Farenheit Entertainment, Civ. Act. No. CV-014297 (Cal. Sup. Ct. Marin Co. Sept. 2001). Class Counsel’s Memorandum, Doc. 41 at 12. Class Counsel notes that, in DoubleClick, “[the] [d]efendant, an Internet ad-serving company, revised its notice, choice and data collection practices and conducted a privacy-oriented public information campaign,” id., while, in DseLise, “sellers of interactive music CD updated privacy policies, added warning labels to CDs, and purged previously collected data.” Id. If the changes that Google made to the Buzz program were a result of the present action, Class Counsel’s comparison to Lane, DoubleClick, and DseLise might have been justified. However, that reliance is, in fact, wholly unjustified, as set forth in Point III, supra.

CONCLUSION

Based upon the foregoing, Putative Class Member Tanya Rudgayzer respectfully requests that this Court deny final approval of the Proposed Settlement Agreement.

Dated: January 10, 2011

HENDRIX & WEHAGE, LLP

/s/ Joseph A. Hendrix
Joseph A. Hendrix
500 N. State College Blvd., Suite 1100
Orange, California 92868
Telephone: (714) 919-4440
Facsimile: (719) 919-4450

- and-

1
2 DANIEL A. OSBORN
3 OSBORN LAW, P.C.
4 295 Madison Avenue, 39th Floor
5 New York, New York 10017
6 Telephone: (212) 725-9800
7 Facsimile: (212) 725-9808

8 - and-

9 TODD C. BANK (motion for pro hac
10 vice admission pending)
11 TBLaw101@aol.com
12 119-40 Union Turnpike
13 Fourth Floor
14 Kew Gardens, New York 11415
15 Telephone: (718) 520-7125
16 Facsimile: (866) 698-7850

17 Attorneys for Objector
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on the 10th day of January, 2011, a true and correct copy of the foregoing MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES will be filed and served via the Court's electronic filing and transmission system and has been served via electronic mail to the following attorneys:

Gary Mason, Esq.
Mason LLP
1625 Massachusetts Ave., NW
Suite 605
Washington, DC 20036
gmason@masonlawdc.com

David J. Burman, Esq.
Perkins Coie LLP
1201 Third Avenue
Suite 4800
Seattle, WA 98101-3099
dburman@perkinscoie.com

s/ Daniel A. Osborn